Building our future

Calgary's business school is expanding

Scurfield Hall has been the home of the Haskayne School of Business since 1986.

When the building first opened, the school had approximately 1,000 students who attended classes in traditional lecture halls. Our numbers and our teaching methods have changed significantly since then.

Today, too many of Haskayne's 4,000 students need to attend classes in other parts of campus because the facilities in Scurfield Hall are full. This is a critical time for the school to expand in support of our strategic growth and bold vision.

The Haskayne Capital Expansion Project will enable the construction of a second building, Mathison Hall, and enhancements to our existing space. When Mathison Hall opens its doors in 2022, a new era will begin for the Haskayne School of Business.

Together, we will:

- Add significant capacity for teaching and learning, research and community engagement with a cohesive and dynamic new environment.
- Create a home for our students by bringing all business classes back to the business school with new places to collaborate, study and learn.
- Build a student-centered learning environment that will combine classrooms with innovative technology, functional and collaborative study spaces and meeting rooms, student advising and career services into one beautiful space.
- Support the growth of our MBA, Master of Management, Doctor of Business Administration and BComm programs with state-of-the-art facilities, high level resources and services.
- Welcome the community on campus to connect and convene at special events, to learn from thought leaders and renowned speakers, and to enrich our student experience.

The Haskayne School of Business is preparing tomorrow's leaders for an unpredictable future. These problem solvers will be nimble, resourceful and ideally equipped to tackle the unforeseen challenges of a changing economy.

We know change is coming rapidly — whether it is disruption from a global health crisis, artificial intelligence, alternative energy technologies or new business models — and Haskayne students will be the critical thinkers with the practical skills to rise to the challenge.

At Haskayne, we deliver a future focused, world-class business education; it's time for our facilities to catch up.

This is where big ideas come to life and bold leaders thrive.

“ I am incredibly excited to see Mathison Hall take form!

Between taking classes in this new facility to discovering a comfortable space to study, Mathison Hall will help shape my university experience and that of many future Haskayne students.

Emily Chen, BComm student and 2019 recipient of the Richard and Lois Haskayne Legacy Scholarship

Investing in the business school of the future

In May 2018, the university committed $50 million towards our $90-million capital expansion project. In June 2018, Calgary business leader and philanthropist Ronald P. Mathison made a $20 million gift to Energize: The Campaign for Eyes High, UCalgary's $1.3 billion fundraising campaign, spearheading the philanthropic funding for this ambitious project. In his honour, the new building will be named Mathison Hall.

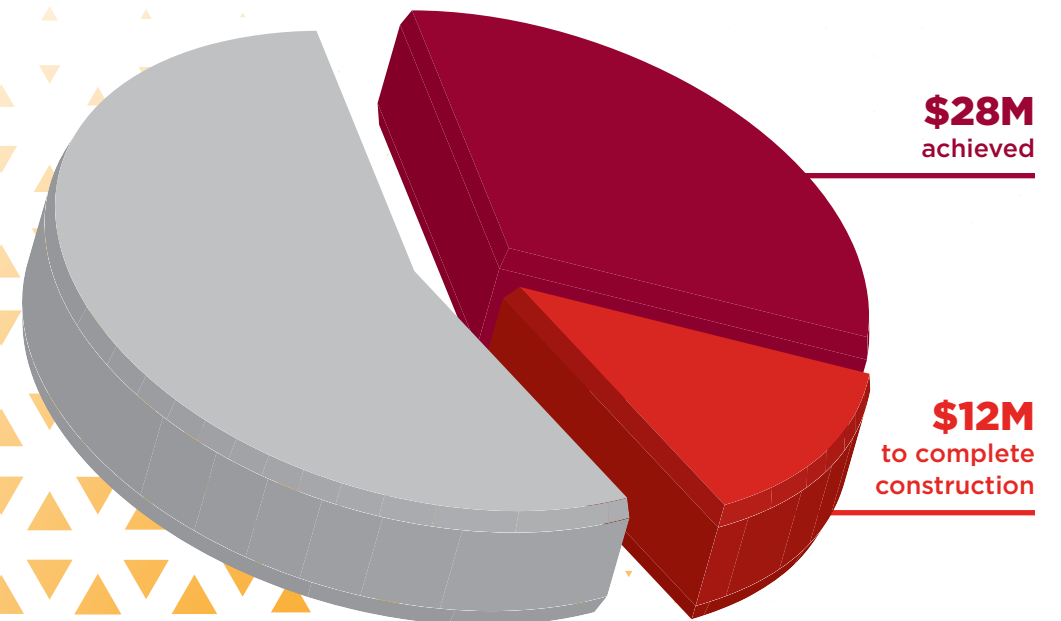

Other philanthropic leaders in our community have also stepped up to invest in the project, including Rob Peters and family, Michael and Renae Tims, as well as Mac and Susan Van Wielingen, through Viewpoint Foundation.

We are now seeking additional philanthropic investments to complete the new building and enhance the existing Scurfield Hall. These new facilities will be a state-of-the-art home for the Haskayne School of Business — not just for today, but for generations of bold leaders to come.

When you invest in the Haskayne Capital Expansion Project, you are laying a new foundation for the next generation of business leaders. Together, we will create a physical legacy for business education — a place where students will experience unparalleled learning opportunities, where scholars will deliver more innovative research, and where we can gather with the community to create meaningful connections.

The following giving opportunities are available:

Convening places $1-2 million

Mathison Hall will be a home for students, faculty, staff and community with spaces for many needs in addition to teaching and learning: quiet focus, group work, socializing, eating, gathering and engaging with our community. Key spaces include:

- A 300-person event space
- A social staircase
- Student commons
- Business library

Leading-edge classrooms $500,000-750,000

Our aim is to deliver all business courses at Mathison and Scurfield Halls. The Haskayne Capital Expansion Project will bring 11 new classrooms ranging in size from 40 to 80 seats. These technology enhanced classrooms, including a trading and finance lab, will be configured for innovative teaching and learning.

Collaboration spaces $100,000-250,000

With an emphasis on transparency and with large windows to allow an abundance of natural light, we are striving to create functional and inviting spaces where education is fully visible and accessible. Syndicate rooms will offer bright, appealing places to work in small groups. Meeting rooms and student lounges will enable student clubs, staff and faculty to connect and collaborate.
